Quite so Lem of Nade, quite so...

Akrow giggling on stream??

For some unknown reason AKrow was giggling A LOT on a recent livestream. There has been speculation as to why he was giggling, but many people seem to think Anna was making him laugh. Regardless, whoever was making AKrow laugh and break character on stream like this must have been a very funny individual and as such, I wish you the best on your future comedic endeavours.

“” – unknown

“anna also makes me giggle on stream though” – Akrow

Most boring newspaper week

Come on guysssss do interesting stuff, my English GCSE can only get me so far with waffling some random stuff in this newspaper to make it seem like more happened, and making the font size large can only go so far.

I mean, I could in theory type like this for the remainder of the article, but that’d be pretty crap...

Envy shits himself in general chat?????/

Envy AKA Eenvxty AKA Envytina AKA Envy Charm AKA Envy but visibly schizophrenic pooped in the general chat of Discord.gg/Enivya after finding out just how barren the newspaper is, do you want this to continue? Is this a future you want? A world where envy poops everywhere in the chat? This is truly devastating news and I am eternally distraught in respect to what happened here today.

This also came with the allegations that he had pinged everyone in Rounded – however, it turned out to be that Burger had gotten trolled by a discord nerd hack which lets you disguise pings in a wall of markdown that is invisible lest to the raw text format.

“I think it’s really crazy! How could envy dare poop in general” - Burgerpooguy

The Great Fire of London

I am going to write a history essay because youse can’t do anything interesting.

On the 5th of September 1666 (Exactly 359 years ago, from the release of this newspaper), the Great Fire of London had finally subsided. However, there was much more to it than just a big fire!

Everyone knows that the Great Fire of London was caused by a baker, but at the time this was not widely known! Many believed this was a terrorist attack by the French or Papists (or both) who wanted to dismantle the Protestant way of life. This thinking is seen only 10 years later when Titus Oates fabricates some lore than the Catholic Church was going to assassinate King Charles II to turn England Catholic once more, this kind of theory also painted a hellish and rather descriptive reality... However, he was actually just chatting out of his arse! (not after getting a few innocent people executed, whoopsie daises). This is relevant later!

Anyways, London was (and still is) a dump so it was the perfect scenario for a fire, all that outdated medieval thatch and timber, with houses that circumvented laws by becoming thicker the higher they went to the point they were touching – now repeat this many times and you basically have London up unto this point. So, when a fire starts in a bakery and the demolition of the surrounding houses to prevent said fire is refused by the Lord-Mayor because boohoo the landlord might be upset, you get a pretty big fire indeed (and more than just a single upset landlord)...

Of course, it goes out of control and only until the wind dies down several days later does the fire finally come to rest, and the charred remains of London are able to be looked upon for the very first time. Over 13,000 homes were destroyed, around 85% of the city within the Roman walls of Londinium, and around 15% of all homes in London as a whole.

A French man named Robert Hubert confessed to starting the fire, highly unfortunate, their fears and conspiracy were all true – the French had really sent someone to burn London down!! Except, the man was not even in London, and this was known by the persecutors who later saw him executed. To clarify, the Popish Plot hoax did take place after the fire itself, but it stoked on fears that were present before and ever more so after the fire had taken place.

The baker signed the document placing all the guilt upon the Frenchman, condemning him to death. I just want to add that this specific part took a lot of research because there was no evidence provided previously to back up this claim, so finding and understanding the credibility of a source I found to see it as evidence was crucial here – however, after scouring to find it I can ascertain to the fact that this indeed did happen, even if the original transcript is NOT widely available to the public. It is quite sad as a historian that this is the case, and it is odd considering that the nature of an event that happened over 350 years go is still being somewhat hidden.

What happened to Robert was cruel, liar or not. He was likely tortured to no end for him to “confess” to the crime that he did not even commit – but the conspiracy needed to be put down one way or another. After he was hung, a large mob tore his body limb from limb as he was to be taken away. The public’s fear of a French Catholic Conspiracy had been satisfied.

Just as a note, while I am infact a History student – I do not have a degree and am not a reputable source of information, even if I have done my very best to make this as accurate but also as simple as possible. If you want to learn more about this topic you should definitely do your own research as I have barely scratched the surface on the subject at hand!

Pet Appreciation - Andreea's Car

credit: ashtheamethyst

This week's pet is Andreea's (andreea_lestrange) cat named Pufi. Pufi is around 5-6 years old and she was discovered in Andreea's back yard along with other kittens. Her mother decided to keep Pufi and she has been living her best life since.

Pufi is a very picky eater, and LOVES her dry food, she hardly eats snacks and will only eat meat every special occasion or so. Pufi's favorite hobby is to listen to Andreea's voice calls and meow whenever Andreea is talking so that pufi's presence is known.

"she is a VERY talkative cat, 90% of the time she meows just to meow" – Andreea
